

Using the Low Poly Builder -LPB- Royalty Free License

LPB products are Royalty Free. This means that after purchasing the LPB product you are not required to make any future payments (or pay further royalty fees), you will grant access to updates of the purchased pack, and you can use LPB products for as long as you like, in multiple projects, as long as you comply with the license agreement. The Royalty Free License is the final and authoritative agreement on your PERSONAL USE.

You are not allowed to RE-SELL any pack, city, object or plugin purchased from Low Poly Builder products, doing it will cause legal consequences of copyrights.

Games Usage

Redistribution: Most uses (including games made with Unity and Unreal engine) are acceptable for redistribution because the 3D files are part of a larger creation and not in an open format. Giving away the 3D model file itself is not allowed.

Virtual Good Sales: You may NOT import, upload, reproduce, make available, publish, transmit, distribute, or sublicense LPB Products in Creations of virtual goods or worlds for any 3D community (“Virtual World”).

Redistribution

Allowed games usage: Console, PC, web, mobile games; Virtual and augmented reality; Game mods; Closed MMOs and closed Virtual Worlds.

Prohibited games usage:

- Redistributing or otherwise making LPB products available to end-users.

If you are redistributing something that includes actual 3D product files, the LPB files must be part of a larger creation and not in an open format that others can be downloaded. Most game engines, such as Unity and Unreal, handle this automatically. In general, to prevent your end-users from obtaining LPB products, you should use proprietary formats that cannot be extracted, exported, or decompiled without reverse engineering.

- Using LPB products in Virtual Worlds. This use is prohibited if the virtual world-type is an open MMO, like Second Life. However, the use is allowed if the MMO is a closed MMO, like World of Warcraft. More specifically, the 3D model may not be exported or sold.

- Using LPB products in Browser based games. This use is prohibited if the game runs in WebGL and the LPB products can be extracted or decompiled.

Corporate Use

Allowed corporate usage: Architectural renderings, Website design, Corporate communications, Marketing collateral.

Prohibited corporate usage:

Business logos or trademarks.

You are free to use LPB products as part of project that features a business logo or trademark, but the LPB product cannot be an actual component of the business logo or trademark because you cannot trademark somebody else's 3D model design (and make it exclusively your own).

Templates.

You may not redistribute LPB materials as part of any design template, After Effects template, stock photography, video or clip art for distribution or licensing through any online stock media clearinghouse.

Educational Use

Allowed Educational Usage: Instructional videos, Walkthrough tutorials, Course work.

Prohibited Educational Usage: You may not redistribute any altered or unaltered part of LPB products to your students. If you wish to use free LPB materials, you may instruct your students to sign up on LPB so that they can download the same free content or make their own purchase.

Physical Creations - 3D Printing

As long as the purchased 3D models is part of a larger work that substantially changes the creation, or incorporates the model in a larger collection physical objects, it's fine to use for 3D printing and other physical creations like articles of manufacture, custom vehicles, furniture, jewelry, sculptural artwork, toys, and physical entertainment goods ("Creations of Physical Form").

People ask if they can buy a 3D model and then resell prints of that exact model, which is not allowed.

- Using the model as is: If you just want to use the model without changing it much or making it part of a larger creation, you can do so for up to five items for personal use, gift or donation: 3D prints, apparel, artwork, other physical creations.
